

Investing in Training....

Health and Safety training is of paramount importance for any business within the construction industry, but at Highline we realise that employee wellbeing is just as important. As Investors in People we listen to our employees development goals and work with them to expand their knowledge and skills.

We currently have a number of staff trained in Mental Health First Aid to encourage daily practices that reduce stress and improve mental health culture in the workplace. Highline are always looking to improve as a business for our clients but also be a first class employer for our valued team.

New Role...

Kiera Hughes | Pre-construction Coordinator

Good luck to Kiera as she moves into her new role within the office as our Pre-Construction Coordinator. Kiera is now responsible for being involved in projects during the tender stage of its lifecycle, arranging site visits and subcontractor packages, as well as allocating teams to create and review the final tender document.

What are you looking forward to the most within your new role?

I'm excited to delve into the specifics of the projects that we tender as well as assist in the liaison with subcontractors. I'm looking forward to gaining more knowledge when it comes to quantity surveying and technical services.

Pedestrian Segregation and Goods In upgrade

Highline have been successful in securing a new Pedestrian Segregation and Goods In upgrade with one of our longstanding pharmaceutical clients. The project consists of rearranging the goods in materials and storage to allow us to level and redecorate existing floors and walls. Highline must carry out the design and build of new Dewar bottle and forklift truck storage. The design will consist of structural and civil engineering along with the removal, installation and reconfiguration of new and existing bollards. The project also consists of pedestrian segregation using key clamps and road marking as well as forming a new counter and moving existing racking to the new clients layout. Well done team!
